

Story E Telling
Karen Chace © 2006
Storytelling Magazine March/April 2006

Alexander Technique

Our most important instrument is our voice, and many outside forces, including stress and those dreaded springtime allergies can impact it negatively. The technique can help you maintain your voice, and this site is good starting point if you wish to delve deeper into this method.

<http://www.alexandertechnique.com/>

March is Woman's Natural History Month. If you are developing a storytelling venue on women throughout history these sites will be a valuable resource.

American Women Through Time

A historic chronology with links to relevant websites for each period, along with research sources appropriate for the specified time period.

<http://www.mtsu.edu/~kmiddlet/history/women/wh-timeline.html>

Women's History Links

Information on notable woman who took part in the Gold Rush, Aviation, Science, Medicine and more.

<http://www.suelebeau.com/women.htm>

Canku Ota (Many Paths)

A collection of native stories from many tribes. There are also discussion questions and information at the end of some of the tales, which makes this a wonderful site for educators as well. http://www.turtletrack.org/CO_Indices/CO_Index_Story.htm

Tales of the Daoine Sidhe ~ Folktales of Ireland

Pronounced deenie shee, and meaning the good people, this site lives up to its name with numerous stories about the lovely lads and lassies in legend and lore from Ireland. Pour yourself a good cup of Irish tea, sit back and revel in the magic of the Emerald Isle.

<http://home.iprimus.com.au/sidhe/sidhe.html>

The Next Generation

Say "cheese!" Yes, storytelling has met the digital generation and this new group of tellers is bringing their talents to the table. I offer these websites, which stretch the boundaries of our traditional storytelling.

Center for Digital Storytelling

This California arts organization assists “young people and adults in using the tools of digital media to craft, record, and share the stories of individuals and communities, in ways that improve all our lives.” <http://www.storycenter.org/>

Fringing the Globe

An informative list of festivals for those who enjoy visiting living “on the fringe.”
<http://www.sffringe.org/globe.html>

Tech Head Stories

A plethora of digital storytelling websites highlighting corporate storytelling, personal, educational and historic journals, along with tools to teach you how to “digital storytell.” There is also a good collection of traditional story resources as well.
<http://tech-head.com/dstory.htm>